

Recreation, Sport & Non-Profit Administration

The Recreation, Sport, and Non-Profit Administration major prepares students to lead, manage, and create recreational, sports, and community programs that promote wellness, leisure, and social engagement. Students learn about program development, event planning, volunteer coordination, resource management, and community outreach within both recreational and non-profit sectors. Graduates are prepared for roles in parks and recreation departments, community sports organizations, non-profit agencies, youth programs, and other community-focused settings. This major equips students with the skills needed to plan, organize, and support programs that foster a healthy and active lifestyle.
